It is becoming increasingly clear that the case against Microsoft is not only against Microsoft but against the American people as well. The hate spewed forth by AOL, Sun and Oracle is disgusting and I find it hard to believe that our justice system would side with such companies. Our economy is in the toilet and it needs everything it can get it to rebound (like getting off of Microsoft's back). It is an interesting note that our economy didn't start to decline until the government attacked Microsoft. If DOJ is really interested in helping the American people, it will stop listening to the Microsoft bashers (AOL, Sun and Oracle) and think about what is good for the American people. If anything, I would like an inquiry into how the government justice system can take sides with companies such as AOL, Sun and Oracle when it is clear that none of these companies give a flying goose about the welfare of the American people. Anyway, this madness needs to stop. If AOL, Sun and Oracle want to compete, tell them to lower their prices and become competitive with Microsoft, not have the government destroy Microsoft so that they won't have to provide better products. Also, I resent the fact that the government and Microsoft's competitors think that the American public is so stupid that they can't make a choice on what software they want to run on their systems. If I want to run AOL or use an Oracle database, I will do so. Microsoft has never forced me to use their products. I am very happy with Microsoft and their struggle to make the computer user experience easy. I believe that Microsoft is working for the people not against the people like its competitors. Any politician that fights against Microsoft will lose my vote. It is time for the American justice system to get out of bed with AOL, Sun, and Oracle and think about what is good for the people not what is good for Microsoft's competitors. Please stop trying to destroy Microsoft. It is not good for the economy or the American people.

Yours truly,
An American citizen,
George Huey
